Racing the Wildcat

By CLAUDINE SISSON

Copyright, 1905, by E. C. Parcells

That Keswick, after a college course, should return to Vaudon and take a place as motorman on the Vaudon and Arverne trolley line was a little more than a nine days' wonder in Vaudon, where the Keswicks had lived for half a century.

Great promises had been made on Renton Keswick's behalf when he decided to take a portion of his father's insurance money and complete his college course, and it was confidently predicted that he would make a name for himself in the city beyond when his four years should be up. Instead he had quietly returned to his old home and had applied for and obtained a place as motorman on the new line just completed to Arverne.

Even Horace Custis had been somewhat surprised at Ren's request to be put on a car. "We could use you here in the office, Ren," he suggested as he swung around in his office chair.

"No, thank you," was Renton's quiet rejoinder. "I want to know something about trolleying before I sit in front of a roll top desk, and I guess the front platform of a car is as good a place as any from which to study."

So Custis had let him go, and that evening when Dorothy Custis remonstrated with him for not doing better by the son of his old friend he laid a hand on her shoulder.

"Dot," he said kindly, "for your sake as well as for the sake of poor Tom Keswick I would have been glad to put the boy to work in the office, but a college education has not spoiled him, and I gave him the place for which he asked."

Dorothy, blushing to find that her secret was known to her father, fled to her room, and after that the subject was dropped so far as the Custis household was concerned.

Vaudon was more interested, however, and there were many who freely remarked that if Ren Keswick could not do better than a motorman's job after all that schooling it would have been better had he lost himself in the city.

Meanwhile Ren stuck to the motorman's box, and in a short time he was regarded as the best operator on the road. He knew every curve and grade on the eighteen miles of track, and his car was never late, because no matter what the delay he knew how to favor the work and come up to the Vaudon station on time.

Once when there had been a break at the power house which shut off the power from the line for twenty minutes he had raced the accommodation from the brook crossing to the station and had beaten it by three minutes. It was an eight mile run from the crossing to the station by trolley, but the railroad took a curve to avoid crossing Arverne creek twice and had four miles farther to go.

Dorothy was a frequent passenger on the car, and it was natural that she should avail herself of her privilege as daughter of the president of the road to ride on the front seat with the motorman. If she happened to take the car on which Ren was the motorman it certainly had the appearance of an accident, and not even Vaudon talked about it—which was surprising.

Those rides were precious times to Renton as he stood at the controller and nursed the heavy car over the tracks. Once when he had been late and was hurrying to make up his time she had looked up with glowing eyes as he helped her down the step.

"I'd just love to be with you some time when you are making a real fast run," she smiled, and he, smiling back into the eager eyes, had replied:

"If I ever have to make a real fast run I'll let you know."

She was talking of his promise as they sped toward the town one evening in August. There had been a dance out at Arverne lake, and Dorothy had left early to meet her father. A celebration was being held some thirty miles up the road, and her father was among the invited guests. They were coming home on a special train, the governor and his staff and half a hundred others. The train was due at Vaudon at about the same time as the special, and Dorothy had left the party early in order to be home to meet her father.

Once or twice Ren had let out the car on level stretches to see her eyes flash with excitement and had crept along the harder parts to keep his schedule even.

They were taking it easy along the stretch by the creek when, as they approached the railroad, they spied a headlight up the track.

There was plenty of time, and rather than take chances Ren stopped on the near side of the crossing and rested on the seat a moment as the light drew nearer.

As it flashed past there was a cry from Dorothy. In the moonlight she saw that there was no one in the cab.

"Did you see?" she demanded excitedly as she grasped Ren's arm.

"Runaway," he assented.

"The train!" she gasped. Ren's face grew hard.

There was a construction camp up the road, and he recognized this as the engine of the work train. There had been threats made against the governor by some of the foreign laborers, and they had probably sent the engine adrift in the hope of obstructing the track and wrecking the train.

If the fires burned down it would come to a halt on the track, and if the engineer of the special did not see it there would be a wreck. If the fires kept up steam, there might be an even more dangerous collision while the engine was in motion.

Ren turned to the conductor. There were but the three on the car. "Don't lose the wire!" he shouted as he turned toward the front. He bent over Dorothy. "Hold tight!" he cried. "Here is your fast run!" And he turned on the current.

For a moment there was a whir as the motor gained speed, and then they were off. Ren knew that he must reach the station before the special left or there would be no hope. In another moment they were running at top speed, and the car swayed and rattled as though it would leave the track. But Ren knew every dangerous spot, and the car sped along, slowing down at the curves just enough to hold to the rails. The gong rang almost constantly at the crossings, but there was little traffic, and they had a clear road through. Once or twice a teamster pulled up suddenly and swore as the rush frightened his horses.

Dorothy's eyes blazed with excitement as she clung to the seat. She guessed why the run was being made, and even her fear for her father did not spoil her enjoyment of the speed. She had confidence in Ren.

At last they were in the village and were speeding up the street. He slowed up as much as he dared, but he could hear the panting of the engine and knew that the special was already in the station. There would not be a long stop, and he gritted his teeth as he threw on full power again, for in the distance he heard the rattle of the wildcat.

One glance showed him that the engine of the special was below the only siding this side of the station. There was no time to back and throw open a switch. The engine would be upon the train before anything could be done. He satisfied himself of this and made up his mind quickly. He shut off the power and ground down the brakes, stopping in the center of the track. He sprang to Dorothy and, catching her up in his arms, jumped from the car and staggered away from the track.

Another instant and a crash told that the wildcat had run into the car. He set the girl down and turned to see. The engine had been thrown completely off the track, and the special was safe.

In a daze he received the congratulations showered upon him until he heard the president of the railroad company speaking.

"We are going to put in several trolley lines," he was saying, "and we want just such a quick witted chap as yourself as general manager."

He looked at Dorothy, and Dorothy's eyes said "Yes." She had known all along that he was seeking practical experience for just such a post as this, and they were to be married when he had won.

A Story of Carnegie the Boy.

"I once visited Dunfermline, Mr. Carnegie's birthplace," said a Chicago man. "They told me there a story about him that illustrated the tenacity and perseverance of his childhood; his bulldog determination to ride down every obstacle and reach the end.

"It seems that at the little Dunfermline school the master called Andrew up one day and asked him how much seven times nine was.

"The boy, unable to hit on the answer immediately, began to go over the entire table:

"'Twice nine is eighteen, thrice nine is twenty-seven, four times nine is thirty-six, five'—

"But the master interrupted impatiently.

"'No, no,' he said. 'Give me the answer straight off.'

"After some thought the boy again:

"'Twice nine is eighteen, thrice nine is twenty-seven, four times'—

"'No. Straight off,' repeated the master.

"'Haud yer gob, man,' the boy cried passionately. 'Ye've spoilt me twice, an' do ye want to spoil me a third time?'"

Growth of the Hair.

The hair is not like plants. It is nothing more than unsensible threads of skin, or, rather, papillae, as they are called, which grow in their proper places under the same conditions as the nails on the finger ends. The hair papillae do not lie on the surface of the skin, but are sunk more or less deeply into it, more deeply as the hair is longer, so that long hairs adhere in a deep sac. The number of these hair papillae of course varies considerably with different people, but for each individual is constant and unchangeable and cannot be increased any more than can the number of one's finger nails. The number of hairs depends on the papillae; consequently if there are no papillae there can be no hair. Moreover, the number of these papillae is constant, so that the idea of increasing their number by clipping the hair must be abandoned. The growth of the hairs depends rather on the well being of all the papillae, but they are constituent parts of skin and share its fate alike in both good and evil days.

First Letter Carriers.

It is not clear that the letter carriers were regularly employed before 1753, when tradition tells us that Benjamin Franklin, the new postmaster general, employed them in Philadelphia and possibly in New York. The earliest evidence we have is of 1762, when the Philadelphia postmaster advertised that his "boy" had run away and that patrons must call for their letters at the postoffice. The Postal Journal of Hugh Finlay, a storehouse of sound information, tells us that Boston had no letter carrier in 1773. Of New York he says that "soon after the arrival of a mail the letters are quickly delivered by a runner," which means messenger or letter carrier.

CHRISTMAS AT SANDRINGHAM

How the Royal Family of Great Britain Celebrates.

The royal family of Great Britain keeps up Christmas at Sandringham in a right royal and old fashioned way.

Tasteful decorations with holly and mistletoe abound everywhere. Every one comes down to the dining room, where breakfast is taken en famille. Every one has presents for some one else. All the servants and tenants are remembered, so that there are many happy hearts on Christmas morning. Substantial joints, geese and turkeys with other good things, have a delightful way of turning up at the very houses where they are most wanted.

After breakfast the royal family and guests and the ladies and gentlemen of the household go on a tour of inspection to view the decorations, and then, provided the weather is fine, they walk to church, which, of course, has been tastefully adorned in appropriate and approved Christmas fashion. On the entry of the king and queen the congregation rises—that is the only formality observed. The king's domestic chaplain takes the service—a bright choral service, with Christmas hymns and an anthem.

Then comes luncheon—which is the children's dinner—attended by the king and queen and other members of the family. The Christmas pudding is brought in, blazing up merrily, to the intense delight of the little princes and princesses.

The late afternoon is the most exciting time for the juniors. The doors of a certain room have been kept rigorously fastened since the previous evening, her majesty and other members of her family having duly dressed a large Christmas tree therein. The door is opened, and the whole party troops in, while the royal children evince the greatest delight at the Christmas tree ablaze with lights and weighed down with presents. Afterward all sorts of games are entered into with a heartiness and zest that must surely appeal to every one.

Dinner comes along at 8:45, to which all guests staying in the house and many of the household are invited by the king. The king and queen and guests assemble in the drawing room first, and then a procession is formed, led, of course, by their majesties, who are followed in order of precedence by the others. The tables are laid in the grand salon. The guests are seated at small oval tables, the king and queen sitting opposite each other at one, and are waited on by special footmen. Boar's head, baron of beef and plum pudding are the staple dishes of the royal Christmas dinner.

After dinner there may be a dance or a command performance in the state ballroom, the walls of which are decorated by gorgeous Indian trophies presented to his majesty when he visited that country.—Pictorial Magazine.

The Universal Desire.

She was superbly dressed in the pinnacle of fashion and would have been beautiful but for a certain stern, businesslike expression that rather marred the sweetness of her face.

First looking up and down, she darted swiftly into a narrow passageway and was soon knocking at a door emblazoned with the legend: "Signor Oleo Margerino. Clairvoyant. Future Foretold."

The door opened.

"Where is the signor?" she nervously demanded.

"In bed, mum."

"Horrors! What's the matter with him?"

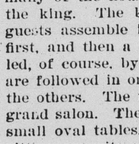
"Nervous prostration, brought on by overwork."

"Overwork?"

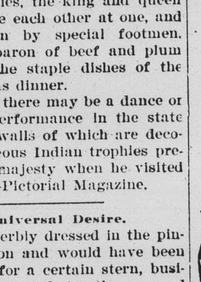
"Yes, mum. Since September he's been busy peerin' into de future fer people wot wanted ter know de value uv Christmus presents dey wuz goin' to get so's they'd know how much ter spend on theirs."

Stifling a shriek of despair, she sped away on the hunt for some other clairvoyant.—New York Herald.

The Song of the Cradle.



Bye, bye! Hope rises high:
There's a sweet little cradle hung up in the sky;
A dear little life that is coming to bless;
Two soft chubby hands that will pat and caress;
A pure little soul winging down from above;
A darling to care for, a baby to love.



One of the grandest agencies which enlightened Science has discovered to relieve motherhood from excessive suffering is the "Favorite Prescription" devised by Dr. R. V. Pierce, chief consulting physician of the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, of Buffalo, N. Y.

This wonderful "Prescription" imbues the entire nervous system with natural, healthy vitality; gives elastic vigor to the delicate organism specially concerned in motherhood, and makes the coming of baby entirely free from danger and almost free from pain.

"I wish to state that I have used Doctor Pierce's Favorite Prescription with very good results," writes Mrs. Katie M. Annis, of Hudson, New Hampshire. "Had been in poor health for over four years and had been twice in the hospital. My husband brought some of your 'Favorite Prescription,' and it has carried me easily through my last two confinements. We are now blessed with two healthy children, and I am sure your medicine has done me more good than all the other treatment I have ever received."

BAD HEADACHES generally arise from bad stomachs. Foul breath, bitter taste, coated tongue, sour eructations or belching of gas, are common symptoms though not all present in every case. To cure, take small doses, only one or two each day, of old Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets, the Original Little Liver Pills, first put up by him over 40 years ago. One or two a laxative, three or four cathartic.

Some Trials in Business Lines of Every-Day Life.

To the young man about to choose a calling in life comes the problem of making a wise selection. He first consults his adaptability or should, but then comes confusion worse confounded, for upon inquiry into different lines he is told that everything has its drawback and this is quite true. He thinks perhaps the law affords a good field in which to try his fortunes but all legal lights, no matter how brilliant, tell the young man to hesitate for the way of the lawyer is hard. In the first place the peaceful and harmonious life is not for the lawyer. He is concerned with the discord of his fellows and his days are spent in untangling knots, in retort, in argument. One has enough troubles of his own but the lawyer, with his own and those of many clients, surely has a hard way. It is true that he is as a rule well dressed and apparently a man of more or less leisure but as a matter of fact he is forever thinking, solving and striving to win against odds. His average state of mind is not an enviable one and is not compensated by even the large fees that some lawyers succeed in getting.

The profession of medicine is still more uninviting, for it brings you into an atmosphere of gloom and though the ministration of the sick is noble work perhaps no class of men are so subjected to criticism and abuse as are physicians. Their's is a delicate task wherein no mistakes are excused. If they effect a cure, it is taken as a matter of course. If they fail and through their failure a home is desolated or a family bereft, money does not compensate then for the injury it does to reputation and peace of mind.

The man in public business, say, for instance, a hotel man, has a thousand petty worries in trying to cater to the public. He has also the help problem to give him trouble, and in spite of countless worries must be genial to be successful. To do this one must be a born optimist and diplomat.

Another field wherein a young man can easily see the hard places is in the field of politics The office-holder and politician, be he ever so conscientious and honest, is looked on with suspicion and those who shake his hand and seem to believe in him have axes to grind some where. In the zenith of his success he is eternally in hot water and after success every one throws cold water upon him. The extremes are disheartening to a young man grouping about for a career.

The editor is not without his troubles. The editor's easy chair is a delusion and a snare. Many people want to use his paper as a public megaphone to give vent to their personal spleen, and if the editor is foolish enough to act as the tool of designing people, thinking thereby to gain their friendship, he finds himself in the silly predicament of the boy who is caught firing spit-balls that the other boys made. All hunt cover, leaving the foolish scribe to his fate, which is justly his. Other troubles are in store for the editor of better judgment. For instance, every imaginable construction is put upon some of his themes.. A bald-headed man once went gunning after an editor because of a joke on bald heads in his weekly paper.

These are just a few examples of conditions that arise in the business lines of every day life.

How a Neighbor Does Things.

In less than two hours Saturday afternoon, two thousand dollars was raised in Petaluma for the furtherance of the work of advertising that city and vicinity through the efforts of the newly organized Chamber of Commerce. A resident of Petaluma named Riley offered to be one of a hundred men of that city who would subscribe one hundred dollars each to make a purse of ten thousand dollars to be used in spreading the fame of that fair section abroad. It was in reponse to this offer that the matter was undertaken Saturday afternoon, merely as a test of the feeling in reference to the matter. It is declared that none approached with the matter neglected to offer his hundred dollar subscription. "This is a commendable spirit," says the Santa Rosa Republican, "and it is believed there will be no trouble whatever in getting five thousand dollars, or half the amount stipulated. If this is done, it is probable that the sum will be fixed at that figure."

McKinlay's Opinion on Immigration.

In a recent interview on immigration Congressman McKinlay expressed himself as follows: "So far as the European, or white races are concerned, there is no immigration problem. This country is the better for every white man, strong and willing to work, who seeks shelter here. It is only in dealing with the Asiatic races that the bars should be put up, and kept up. There should be no discrimination between the Japanese and Chinese. They are both cut out of the same cloth—they both come to exploit the country for their own gain, underselling the labor market, living on 20 cents a day and sending their earnings to their native land every month. There are probably 60,000 Japanese already in this country, and they are pouring in at the rate of 1,000 a month. Personally, I do not believe that the extension of the provisions of the Chinese exclusion act to include the Japanese would offend the government of that country in the least. When I was in Japan with the Taft party I had an extended talk with Marquis Ito, and he told me that the Japanese Government was anxios to keep its people at home."

For Thin Babies

Fat is of great account to a baby; that is why babies are fat. If your baby is scrawny, Scott's Emulsion is what he wants. The healthy baby stores as fat what it does not need immediately for bone and muscle. Fat babies are happy; they do not cry; they are rich; their fat is laid up for time of need. They are happy because they are comfortable. The fat surrounds their little nerves and cushions them. When they are scrawny those nerves are hurt at every ungentle touch. They delight in Scott's Emulsion. It is as sweet as wholesome to them.

Send for free sample.

Be sure that this picture in the form of a label is on the wrapper of every bottle of Emulsion you buy.

VISITING MASONS TO BE ENTERTAINED

Woman's Club May Banquet Visitors on City Hall Day.

It is expected that a large number of visiting Masons and Pioneers will be present at the laying of the corner-stone of the New City Hall on Thursday, February 22nd. The Masonic order will be represented by some very prominent men and the visitors will be entertained by the local lodge and the Sonoma Valley Woman's Club. The ladies of the club will try and arrange to banquet the Masons and Pioneers who will be here for the ceremonies and it goes without saying that they will be royally feted.

Petition For Re-Formation of Watmangh.

A petition will be presented to the Board of Supervisors next Monday asking that the old Watmaugh school district be re-established, which was allowed to lapse a number of years ago. The petition will undoubtedly be granted as there are no valid reasons why it should be acted upon otherwise. On the other hand; there are many reasons why this school be again thrown open to the residents in that part of our valley. The school house is still standing in a fair state of repair and during the past few years ten or twelve new families have taken up their abode in that school district, which is quite remote from Sonoma, into which district it was merged after it had ceased to exist. This being the case we trust that old Watmaugh may again be placed on the school map of Sonoma county.

Card Party.

Mrs. Pauline McMullen entertained the Card Club in a delightful manner last Friday evening. Four tables of players participated and the prizes were won by Mrs. Dorman, who captured a pretty silver hat brush, and Mr. Hotz, who won a gold pencil. The booby prizes fell to the lot of Miss Clewe and Ernest Clewe. There were also two consolation prizes. After the card playing came a delicious repast in the prettily decorated dining room. The table was strewn with violets and smilax and artistic place cards added to the attractiveness of the arrangement. Music and social conversation concluded this delightful evening.

Educational Work.

Educational work of some value has been started by the educational section of the Sonoma Valley Woman's Club. The new chairman of the section, Mrs. F. T. Duhring, is taking an active interest in the work and has mapped out many things for the ladies who are interested in the condition of our schools. A meeting was held last Saturday and the improvement of the school building and out houses was discussed. The matter will be taken up by the section with the school trustees and no doubt good results will come of the work.

The sanitary condition of the school will also be looked into.

The capital stock of the club is $100 and the following directors have subscribed $20 each: James O'Rourke, Walter A. Pool, Julius E. Poppe, L. H. Green and Peter Chaldu.

Mr. Nagle of Santa Rosa has the contract for the brick work and it is reported that Mr. Frank White will do the wood work. The building will be three stories high, 60x80 feet and will embrace all the latest improvements.

The Dunbar Improvement Club met in the school house Saturday afternoon last, a good attendance being in evidence. The bond of Mrs. John Gibson for the Court House lot was accepted and will now go to the District Attorney for inspection prior to its acceptance by the Supervisors, in whose name it is drawn. A proposition to have a free camping park established here was not favorably received. An entertainment in the very near future for the Court House fund was outlined.

CHICKEN COMES HIGH IN SONOMA.

A. Remeigo Is Astonished at Judge Small's Quotation

Chicken comes high in Sonoma. So thinks A. Remeigo, a fancier of other people's poultry, who selected a fine bird, the other day, belonging to Joe Gaizole and thought that he could walk off with it without paying or without detection. He figured wrong, however, for after picking out the bird and decapitating it he was about to make his get away when he was caught red-handed with the chicken in a sack.

His extravagant taste was his undoing and soon he found himself up before Judge Small on a charge of chicken stealing. The bon vivant could not exactly explain his actions to the court so the Judge promptly fined him $20, remarking that chicken was rather expensive in Sonoma. Now, Remeigo could not understand Judge Small's quotation for he had eaten chicken in every style and never knew it to come so high before.

Gives Power Without Responsibility.

To substitute agents personally irresponsible for others whose welfare depends on their individual efficiency in the management of a great business, is not a course that would be favored by any merchant or manufacturer or producer possessed of common sense. Yet that is precisely what is proposed by those who would turn the control of the vast transportation interests of the United States over to politically appointed Commissioners. Railroad managers who are found incompetent are removed. The results of bad railroad management are so conspicuous that it is easy to find the cause and to apply a swift remedy when the incapable official is the servant of a corporation. Every railroad manager is compelled to be continually alert. To conserve and to create business is his constant aim and the measure of his responsibility is ever before him.

No personal penalty attends the blunders, negligence or general inefficiency of the political employee in high place. In the instance of an Interstate Commerce Commission the insolvency of a railroad caused by the act of a Commission or disastrous interference with the prosperity of any part of the United States would not bring dismissal to any Commissioner or any number of Commissioners, nor would it effect Commissioners' incomes in the least. Their standing would not be impaired.

If a law shall be enacted that shall enable the Interstate Commerce Commissioners to "fix" or make railroad rates in the United States, the practical result will be that such Commissioners will control a vast business in which they have no practical experience, and will hold in their hands, with no penalty to be attached to their failures, the immediate future not only of transportation, but also all lines of American commerce trade and production whose interests and whose location even are bound up with traffic conditions that are now arranged for their benefit.

No sane business man would subject his own interests to such risks as are here involved. It is hardly to be supposed that the citizens of the United States, collectively, desire that the entire public prosperity shall be thus jeopardized.

Ready for Business.

John Kelly of Boyes' Springs is now equipped to launch forth on his new mineral water project and on Sunday he will have quite a time in honor of the event, and the new mineral water and the bottling works will be inspected by many friends of Mr. Kelly. The water is attractively put up and each bottle bears a handsome label with the words "Boyes' Mineral Water" in red lettering and a picture of the mineral spring as it looked when discovered by the Indians years ago.

The bottling works are equipped with modern machinery and are operated by electricity. Mr. Kelly has secured the services of a competent man to run the plant and he himself is attending to the outside business. He already has more orders ahead than can be filled in several months.

EL VERANO.

By Occasional.

Thos. Mullen is still on the sick list.

Frank Weaver made a business trip to the metropolis Saturday.

Jack Daughney, the new owner of the Riverside Road Resort, is making many friends here.

Peter Forni has gone to Napa to be near his physician, Dr. E. Z. Hennessey. Mr. Forni is a very sick man.

Ben Curtaz, the well-known piano man, and Martin Luther are up from San Francisco enjoying a vacation in El Verano.

Mr. M. F. Mullen, the indefatigable Southern Pacific agent at this place, has recovered from a severe cold, and is again on deck.

Our summer resort owners are already preparing for an early return of that "good old Summer time," and a big influx of visitors when the season opens.

Supervisor Blair Hart has a force of men and teams at work repairing the approaches to the iron bridge at this place, which came near being washed away by the recent storm.

The meeting held last Sunday by the citizens of this place was largely attended. The object of meeting was to urge upon the Supervisors immediate action to save the iron bridge which crosses Sonoma creek near El Verano Villa. Much credit is due Constable Moyer for getting the people together.

OCCASIONAL.

Hunters Fined

P. Loustalet and Peter Chaldu were arrested on Sunday for violating the hunting laws. Loustalet was fined $10 for shooting on the county road and Chaldu was found guilty of having robins in his possession out of season and Judge Small fined him the sum of $25. Ryan had previously warned the offenders.

ACTION OF THE RAIN.

The Wonderful Factor It Is In the Disintegration of Rocks.

The rain falling on the rocks sinks into every crack and crevice, carrying with it into these fissures surface material which has been degraded by the weather and thus affording a matrix sufficient to start the growth of vegetation and afterward to maintain the plants. The fibers and roots of these plants, bushes and trees thus brought into life, growing and expanding, act as wedges to split up the surface of the rock and to commence the process of wearing away. From this quality of destruction a large class of plants derive the name of saxifrages, or rock breakers, from their roots penetrating into the minute fissures in search of water and so assisting in the process of disintegration. In winter the water collected in the hollows and crevices becomes frozen and, expanding as it changes into ice, acts like a charge of blasting material in breaking up the rock. The pieces thus detached become further disintegrated by frost and weather and, being rolled over and over and rubbed against each other as they are carried away down the mountain torrents, are ground gradually smaller and smaller till from fragments of rock they become bowlders, then pebbles and finally sand. As the mountain stream merges into the river the pebbles and coarse sand continue to be rolled along the bottom of the channel, while the ragillaceous particles and salts become mingled with the water and flow on with it either in suspension or solution.

While this disintegrating process is going on inland the rocks and cliffs on the coast exposed to the sea are suffering degradation by a similar process and are also being worn away by the incessant action of the waves of the ocean beating on them and attacking them not only with the impact of the water, but also with the fragments broken off, which, dashed against the face from which they have eroded, are thus used as implements of destruction.

THE GARDEN OF EDEN.

Its Location a Mystery That Will Probably Never Be Solved.

The location of the earthly paradise or garden of Eden is still a matter of dispute among orientalists and Scriptural scholars of highest reputation. Some have endeavored to locate it by the fruits and mineral productions named in the Biblical descriptions as they appear in the second chapter of Genesis; others by the rivers mentioned in verses 11 to 14 of the above mentioned chapter. The weight of investigation and tradition inclines to an agreement that the Tigris and the Euphrates of modern geography are the third and fourth rivers mentioned in the Biblical description of the garden. Those who agree so far differ widely as to what rivers should now be regarded as the ancient Pison and Gihon. The Buddhistic scholars, although they reject our Bible in the greater part, incline to the opinion that the Pison is the sacred Ganges, and that the Gihon is none other than the Nile. As to the last, it is altogether probable that they are correct on that point, because the Biblical account plainly says that Gihon "compasseth the whole land of Ethiopia."

Some investigations confirm that Eden was a spot of comparatively small area located on the tablelands of what is now Armenia, from which rise the Tigris and the Euphrates. A few scholars of distinction argue that the Adamic paradise was located in Africa in the vicinity of the mountains of the Moon. Still another school of orientalists locate the celebrated garden in the vicinity of the ancient city of Babylon.

You will notice, however, that none of these theorists has been able to get the four rivers mentioned in the Biblical account properly located. Neither have they found a place where one great river "separates into four heads." This being the case, it is hardly necessary to add that the exact location of Eden is a mystery that will probably never be solved.

The Scott of the Middle Ages.

John Florissant, born in 1337, is called the Walter Scott of the middle ages. He was a churchman and a scholar. Living as he did in unsettled times, before nationality had become well developed, he was destitute of patriotism and, therefore, more reliable as a cosmopolitan chronicler. He traveled in France, Scotland, Italy and other countries. His chronicles are the result of his own observations and are valued as a faithful portrayal of the places, customs and manners of the people during his time, although not so reliable as history.

The Word "Opera."

The word "opera" is a case of verbal specialization. Yet the Latin word meant originally nothing more definite than "work." The specialization, however, was thorough even in the time of Dryden, who defined an opera as "a poetical tale of fiction, represented by verbal and instrumental musick, adorned with scenes, machines and dancing," but the specialization is scarcely more remarkable than that of "drama," which means just "deed," "action," or of "poet," which is simply "maker."

A Pithy Sermon.

Here is the pithiest sermon ever preached: "Our ingress into life is naked and bare, our progress through life is trouble and care, our egress out of it we know not where; but, doing well here, we shall do well there. I could not tell more by preaching a year."

He that is ungrateful has no fault but one. All other crimes may pass for virtues in him.—Young.

Little Red Riding-hood.

Little Red Riding-hood is the heroine of a well known nursery tale, which relates her encounter with a wolf in the forest, the arts by which he deceived her and her tragical end. Grimm derived the story from tradition current in the region bordering upon the river Main, in Germany. The legend is, however, widely disseminated. In the Swedish variation of the story Little Red Riding-hood takes refuge in a tree, the wolf meanwhile gnawing at the roots, when her lover, alarmed by her cries, comes up just in time to see the tree fall and his ladylove crushed beneath it.

The Old Time Almanac.

An old minister in a Massachusetts town tells how implicitly the people of a generation ago trusted the weather predictions of the "Farmer's Almanac." One of his flock had died, and the pastor was consoling his widow. The subject of the funeral came up, and he asked when it was to be. "Wait, doctor," said she; "we must have it on a pleasant day." She hurriedly searched the almanac, and the day was set.

He Obeyed the Law.

The professor swims from the sinking boat and climbs up on the bank. Then, dashing in again, he returns to the wreck and rescues his wife.

"But why didn't you save her before?" asks the captain in amazement.

"Ah, my dear sir," was the learned man's reply, "I was bound to save myself first. Self preservation is the highest law of nature."—Fliegende Blatter.

No Quarrel.

Housewife—And you left your last place because of a quarrel with your mistress? Applicant—Not a quarrel, mum. Housewife—How was it, then? Applicant—Well, mum, she was afther interferin' wid me, an' I spoke to her as one lady to another.—Cleveland Leader.

Contracted Chronic Catarrh While in the Philippines.

"While with the U. S. Army in the Philippines I contracted chronic diarrhoea I suffered severely from this terrible disease for over three years and tried the prescriptions of numerous physicians, but found nothing that did me any good until I tried Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, two small bottles of which cured me and I have since had no return of the disease." Herman Stein, 212 N. Union Ave., Pueblo, Colorado. For sale by Shoults & Co.

Rev. Carlisle P. B. Martin, L. L. D.

Of Waverly, Texas writes: "Of a morning, when first arising, I often find a troublesome collection of phlegm which produces a cough and is very hard to dislodge, but a small quantity of Ballard's Horehound Syrup will at once dislodge it, and the trouble is over. I know of no medicine that is equal to it, and it is so pleasant to take. I can most cordially recommend it to all persons needing a medicine for throat or lung trouble." Sold by L. S. Simmons.

A Topsy Turvy Party.

A topsy turvy party is good fun at Christmas. Everything is done at this party "the other way around." For instance, a very small Christmas tree is fastened to the ceiling upside down. On the floor a number of packages should be laid. In the packages you must be sure to have the topsy turvy scheme. In all those intended for the girls you should put only such things as boys like or use, and the older the guest the simpler should the toys be. The next thing in this topsy turvy party after the distribution of the packages is to have some one enter the room dressed as Santa Claus with an empty basket on his back or in his hand, but instead of giving each person a present he must demand one from each person. Later on in the evening the guests play a game of forfeits, when they have a chance of getting back their gifts.

A Few Christmas Don'ts.

Don't fuss, don't hurry, don't worry, don't fret. Christmas has come and gone many times and will come and go again. Don't do one single thing, then, for at least two weeks that will jar you into forgetting that it was the birthday of peace and good will.—Philadelphia Record.

The Paddy Bird.

One of the best known of feathered creatures in India is the paddy bird. A traveler says of him: "The paddy bird is not afflicted with shyness. He is far too lazy to be disturbed by the approach of human beings. So confiding is he that the natives of India call him the blind heron. I once saw one of these birds standing motionless at the water's edge within ten feet of a grunting, perspiring washerman, who was dashing some clothes to pieces against a stone in a dirty duck pond. That is the way washing is done in India. Neither individual took the least notice of the other."

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy the Best Made.

"In my opinion Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is the best made for colds," says Mrs. Cora Walker of Porterville, California. There is no doubt about its being the best. No other will cure a cold so quickly. No other is so sure a preventive of pneumonia. No other is so pleasant and safe to take. These are good reasons why it should be preferred to any other. The fact is that few people are satisfied with any other after having once used this remedy. For sale by Shoults & Co.

Pleasant and Most Effective

T. J. Chambers, Ed. Vindicator, Liberty, Texas, writes Dec. 25, 1902: "With pleasure and unsolicited by you, I bear testimony to the curative power of Ballard's Horehound Syrup. I have used it in my family and can cheerfully affirm it is the most effective and best remedy for coughs and colds I have ever used." Sold by L. S. Simmons.

POINTED PARAGRAPHS.

Almost every one has need of more sense than he has.

Ever notice that when your judgment gets in its work it is too late?

A great many men imagine they would be governor if the office really sought the man.

It is awfully hard to believe that the man who catches you stealing jam found you at it accidentally.

When a widower is having a love affair, he must wonder what idiot wrote, "The whole world loves a lover."

When people are too easy with you, be careful. They may be letting out enough rope for you to hang yourself with.

Occasionally a man marries to prove that he can do as he pleases and finds when that is done that he no longer can.—Atchison Globe.

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy Absolutely Harmless.

The fault of giving children medicine containing injurious substances is sometimes more disastrous than the disease from which they are suffering. Every mother should know that Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is perfectly safe for children to take. It contains nothing harmful and for coughs, colds and croup is unsurpassed. For sale by Shoults & Co.

Cured His Mother of Rheumatism

"My mother has been a sufferer for many years from rheumatism," says W. H. Howard of Husband, Pennsylvania. At times she was unable to move at all, while at times walking was painful. I presented her with a bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm and after a few applications she decided it was the most wonderful pain reliever she had ever tried, in fact she is never without it now and is at all times able to walk. An occasional application of Pain Balm keeps away the pain that she was formerly troubled with." Sold by Shoults & Co.

Cured Lumbago

A. B. Canman, Chicago, writes March 4, 1903: "Having been troubled with Lumbago at different times and tried one physician after another, then different ointments and liniments gave it up altogether. So I tried once more, and got a bottle of Ballard's Snow Liniment, which gave me almost instant relief. I can cheerfully recommend it, and will add my name to your list of sufferers." Sold by L. S.
